QUALITY, NOT QUANTITY

COLLEGE and university education has outgrown the boom stage, declares Dr. Samuel P. Capen, in the annual report of the United States commission of education, just issued.

"The day of the academic promoter of the inflation of values is over," continues Dr. Capen. "Expansion is still going on, but for the most part unaccompanied by the frenzied advertising so common in the past and encouragingly free from the optimistic confusion of prospects and realities. The developments of the year strengthen the condition which has been ripening for some time that higher education is now looking to its foundation and setting its house in order."

"Colleges and universities have come under the sway of the slogan 'efficiency.' Surveys undertaken by outsiders and by officials of the institution to be examined have become increasingly frequent. There has been vigorous activity on the part of several voluntary associations that concern themselves with standards of entrance, graduation, and constitutional equipment. Some of this activity has crystallized in the form of recommendations that will effect educational procedure over considerable areas. The adoption of some form of group system has been reported to the United States bureau of education by twenty-one institutions, undoubtedly only a fraction of the whole number of colleges that have taken this step."

The idea that it is quality rather than quantity of work done by a college student that counts toward effective education, has already received tangible recognition in a few institutions through the granting of extra credit for quality, says Dr. Capen. Several prominent institutions have been reorganized, and other new departments have been formed, and several others are experimenting with new types of vocational courses related to local industrial activities.

Dr. Capen mentions Montana, Kansas and Idaho as "three more states where the administration of state institutions of higher education has been further centralized through recent legislative action."

MOVEMENT FOR TAX REDUCTION

THERE is a great movement on in Oregon and Washington to lighten tax burdens.

The legislatures of both states lowered levies, reduced appropriations and passed budget laws. Oregon and Washington took steps to limit tax levies in future and to restrict expenditures.

The state, county and city governments are cutting out useless officers, consolidating bureaus and lowering salaries. The result will be a reduction of millions of dollars in the load that the taxpayers had to carry.

Better business conditions will result, and there will be more employment of labor.

But there is still a great deal to be done on the retrenchment line.

An Argument Against Race Suicide

PETER SCHOONEN, WIFE AND FIFTEEN CHILDREN

Peter Schoonen, his wife and their fifteen children are now on their farm in Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Schoonen got tired of trying to care for their large family in Holland, where business has been disturbed by the war. They have come to the United States, bringing their fifteen children, ranging in age from 7 months to 18 years. The family was raised in Friesland, where, despite the handicap of this family, Schoonen managed to save sufficient money to bring his whole brood to the United States.

What the War Moves Mean

By J. W. T. MASON
(Staff Correspondent United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Germany has recognized Sir Edward Grey's charge that she is seeking tribute as her price of peace.

No denial of the charge has been made. Instead, German newspapers taunt England with being more fearful of paying Germany an indemnity than seeing the allies lose any territory. This is declared in Berlin to be the reason the British are so angered at the mention of "tribute." This argument, however, is not legitimate. Great Britain, with her grip on the colonies Germany has lost, and with her successful blockade of shipping, certainly is not in a position of disadvantage. There can be no levy on England or seizure of British territory either under the present conditions or under any at all likely to arise before the conclusion of the war.

The Berlin newspapers are not ignorant of these facts. They are probably attempting to confuse the issue regarding indemnities, or else to create international excitement and trepidation so as to reap the benefits of the reaction in Germany's favor if she announces that she does not want tribute. There is a hint in the North German Gazette that the latter theory may be right. But it is not legitimate to infer that this will be the outcome. Germany knows the allies now believe her to be fighting for tribute. As long as that impression is allowed to remain uncorrected, it will be assumed by the allies that it is true. If it is true, there will certainly be no peace until one side or the other is so exhausted financially that all possibility of obtaining indemnity will have vanished.

Thus, since exhaustion, rather than tribute, is preferred by all the belligerents, the idea of levying tribute really defeats itself. No tribute—that is, no tribute worth fighting for—can be collected from a nation that is bankrupt.

To persist in the demand for tribute, therefore, under present conditions, means to persist in fighting the war to a devastating end. This will leave the victor scarcely better off than the vanquished.

What Germany means by "freedom of the seas" must be defined before peace is possible in Europe. Dr. Dernburg was the first spokesman to announce that Germany would continue to fight until this freedom was secured. He declared this while in New York. But he did not define it in detail, nor has any German statesman attempted to. It is a curious fact that there is so much vagueness regarding the basic principle which Germany insists England must admit before peace is negotiable. Germany is fighting for a formula that has not been worked out, or that gives different results to different persons. Insistence on a generality and reluctance to discuss details, usually implies that a nation is not sure what it can get, and wants the other side to begin talking first.

England, in fact, has begun to talk first. Sir Edward Grey declared freedom of the seas was a reasonable subject for discussion, if linked with guarantees binding Germany as well as

Letters for Thaw
United Press Service
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—When Harry K. Thaw arrived here from Lake Tahoe he found awaiting him at the St. Francis hotel several score of perfumed letters in the handwriting of women. The letters are arriving for Thaw in every mail, the clerks declare. The majority of them were mailed in San Francisco.

Not a Pacifist
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—Mayor Nix of Nogales, Ariz., is not a pacifist. His honor is in San Francisco visiting the exposition and recuperating from the arduous labors of dodging Mexican bullets and superintending a young battle every day or so. Being the chief executive of a border city which has a fight pulled off on its doorstep most any time, is no idle job, in the opinion of Mayor Nix. He believes the use of soldiers and gunpowder is the only solution of the Mexican problem.
